Beyond Statehood
Did you know that there are several Logan County Historical Societies spread across America, each with a similar mission of preserving their county’s history? In order to distinguish ourselves from other organizations in our county and across the country, we are pleased to unveil our new brand “Beyond Statehood.” We feel that Beyond Statehood is a strong statement that our county’s history did not end at statehood. It is our mission to preserve history of Logan County and its people beyond statehood.

The name Angie Debo may sound familiar, but did you know that she did most of her writing in her bedroom in Marshall, Oklahoma? In 1899, when Debo was nine years old, her family travelled by covered wagon to their new farm near Marshall. Even at an early age Debo was an avid learner, but she had to wait for a high school to be built before she could earn her diploma at the age of twenty-three. Debo went on to further her education eventually earning her PhD in History from the University of Oklahoma in 1933. Debo taught at a several schools and served in a variety of academic positions, but she is best known for her publications on Oklahoma and Native American history. While Debo travelled often, she went home to her little white house in Marshall to write. Debo had her house built by her brother, Edwin, in 1927. At the time an oil boom was underway and Debo thought she could build a small house and sell it for a profit in a few years. Instead, the oil boom ended. Debo rented the home for a short while, then her parents moved in, but Debo retained her back bedroom until her parents passed away. After that, Debo continued to view Marshall as home and she did most of her actual writing from her back bedroom. Debo passed away in 1988. Her home was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1996.
Logan County Athletes

As part of our partnership with the Territorial Capital Sports Museum, we will be featuring a series of articles on athletes with connections to Logan County. Our first athlete is Fred Moulder. Moulder was born in Guthrie in 1944. He became the first African American to play little league in Guthrie. He went on to become the first African American to earn All-State in both basketball and baseball in Oklahoma. He continued his tradition of firsts when he became one of two African Americans to be selected to play for the OSU baseball team in 1963. In 1965 he led the OSU team to success with a record of 93 at-bats, 7 home runs, 20 RBIs, 2 triples and 6 stolen bases in a 32-game season.

“I never really worked at baseball that much, basketball was my thing. When I was 11-years old I was playing with the older guys. Hubert ‘Goose’ Ausbie — a longtime Harlem Globetrotter — was one of the guys that would come to Guthrie to play basketball on Sundays.” Fred Moulder

Moulder spent the summer of 1965 playing summer baseball in South Dakota, that June he was drafted by the L. A. Dodgers. In 1965, major league baseball was very different than it is now. After his first season with the Dodgers, he went back to school and started preparing for the university basketball season. He continued to play professional baseball for seven years for the Dodgers, Tigers, Red Sox and Brewers.
